Kathleen King is the Deputy Director of Child Health Policy at the Children's Defense Fund where she helps to to lead CDF's efforts to give every child in America a healthy start in life, ensuring that all children can get and keep comprehensive, affordable health coverage and care. Kathleen is responsible for developing and implementing CDF's child health policy agenda and serves as lead advocate for enhancing child health policy to elected officials and policymakers in Washington, D.C. Since passage of national health reform legislation, she has been working to implement the key provisions of the law affecting children and families, as well as continuing to ensure that all children eligible for health coverage are enrolled. Kathleen also plays a key role in CDF's work on child hunger and nutrition. Before joining CDF, Kathleen served as the project coordinator for the Health Leads (formerly known as Project Health) Family Help Desk at Hasbro Children's Hospital in Providence, Rhode Island and helped to establish the first Family Help Desk in Chicago at the Friend Family Clinic at the University of Chicago. She also worked with the Healthy Schools Campaign in Chicago, Illinois.
