The Robert Wood Johnson Foundation Alumni Network invites you to discover

The Power of Connection...
The Robert Wood Johnson Foundation (RWJF) Alumni Network is a valuable opportunity for graduates of our scholars, fellows and leadership programs across health and health care disciplines to connect with one another and collaborate on ideas and projects. Through the exclusive online community and in-person events, we hope the connections you make through the Network will enrich your work, build and strengthen your ties to one another and to the Foundation, and support the Foundation’s mission to improve health and health care for all Americans.

The RWJF Alumni Network is completely voluntary and free of cost to individuals who have participated in our scholars, fellows and leadership programs since the 1970s.

- Access leadership development, career and mentorship resources
- Post and respond to queries for career and collaborative opportunities
- Learn more about new scholarship and research by other RWJF alumni

Alumni Voices

José Pagán, PhD, MA
Health & Society Scholars
“It is one thing to sit in my office, write about a topic and only interact with folks in a very limited way. However, having access to other RWJF alumni, outside of my world at the university and outside of my program, provides me with a much deeper, more well-rounded understanding of the issues I’m studying.”

Carol Levanoff, MSSA, LISW-S
Ladder to Leadership
“The Ladder to Leadership program provided me with a phenomenal opportunity on multiple levels, including the chance to learn from and work with other professionals in my community. The Network goes beyond, allowing alumni from all programs to have similar links to great minds in the field across the country, so we can apply their work and knowledge to our projects locally. The potential and possibilities are really endless.”

Larry Gentilello, MD, FACS
Innovators Combating Substance Abuse
“This is an opportunity to get to know individuals from other programs. So many RWJF fellows go on to become successful leaders in their fields. The more we know each other, the better we can achieve our career objectives.”

Kelly Devers, PhD
Scholars in Health Policy Research
“You never know when you’re working on a subject what range of ideas or expertise you will need. None of us are professional islands; we are a community and to be able to be successful you need to have access to the best experts in related areas. The Alumni Network is a rich resource for identifying those national experts in certain areas that might be related to your project.”

Fran Roberts, RN, PhD
Executive Nurse Fellows
“Imagine having the opportunity to connect with more than 2,300 other accomplished professionals who work in health and health care. That’s what the RWJF Alumni Network is all about. It provides a platform to collaborate and exchange ideas with a prestigious and multidisciplinary network of leaders. It’s a wonderful opportunity to continue the connections and ideas that were generated while I was an Executive Nurse Fellow.”
Dear Alum,

As a Clinical Scholar alumna, I am excited about the Alumni Network. I am personally looking forward to taking part in all that the Network presents, including a thriving online community, events at locations across the country and other opportunities for alumni across health and health care disciplines to collaborate on existing projects and inspire new ideas.

In this time of unprecedented change in America’s health system, I believe the future of our nation’s health depends on innovative, diverse and inspired leaders like you, who can apply their knowledge and skills to the opportunities that lie ahead.
